DETAILED ACTION

1. The amendment filed January 8, 2008 is objected to under 35 U.S.C. 132(a) because it introduces new matter into the disclosure. 35 U.S.C. 132(a) states that no amendment shall introduce new matter into the disclosure of the invention. The added material which is not supported by the original disclosure is as follows: The disclosure of the guide portion pressing against the cutter blade from above in a manner that the guide body and branch faces are placed on the cutter blades, is deemed new matter not found in the originally filed specification.

Applicant is required to cancel the new matter in the reply to this Office Action.

2. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. The new recitation in claim 1 of the upper plate making contact with the cutter blades is deemed to constitute new matter.

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Japan No. 61-24121 in view of Ballew, and further in view of Aksamit(US 4440045). Japan('121) discloses a chainsaw sharpener comprising substantially all of the subject matter set forth in claim 1, except for the recitation of the wall faces having a substantial X-shape as seen in plan view. Ballew discloses a file guide having diverging walls to form a pair of opposed wall faces forming an X-shape as seen in plan view. To provide side wall faces on the lower surface of the guide body to aid in aligning the grinding tool with respect to the chain saw blade would have been obvious in view of Ballew.

Aksamit('045) discloses a chainsaw sharpener having guide wall faces which are pressed against a guide bar of the chainsaw to stabilize the sharpening tool during use. To simply extend the depending side wall faces on the chainsaw sharpening tool of Japan('121) to contact the chainsaw guide bar in order to stabilize the sharpening tool during use, for more precise sharpening of the cutting edges, would have been obvious in view of Aksamit('045).

5. Applicant's arguments filed January 5, 2008 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The incorporation into the specification of the guide portion pressing against the cutter blade from above in a manner that the guide body and branch faces are placed on the cutter blades, is deemed new matter not found in the originally filed specification. Applicant's new limitation in claim 1, specifying that the upper plate is placed on the cutter blades, is deemed to constitute new matter. Moreover, with regard to the rejection under art, it appears that the upper plate(11)(13) in Aksamit('045) does provide support for the sharpener. Note that the depending walls in Aksamit('045) contact the guide bar of the chainsaw to additionally stabilize the sharpening tool, and prevent the tool from wobbling. Such stabilization of the sharpener in Japan('121) is deemed to be taught by Aksamit. Ballew was applied as before, for the teaching of providing side wall faces on the lower surface of the guide body to aid in aligning the grinding tool with respect to the chain saw blade.
